BY WAY OF EXPLANATION TO OUR PATRONS AND THE PUBLIC.

The cross-head and piston rod of the largest engine at the electric plant has been expressed to Cincinnati for some necessary repairs. Until its return Thursday the plant is without reserve capacity and electric service is subject to interruption and will not be up to the usual high standard. The other engines are being operated continuously except for short shut down at daybreak. In the event of any slight accident or mishap to either one of them it becomes necessary to shut off some part or all the service to remedy the trouble. We do not anticipate any serious difficulty in maintaining the service, but in case of short interruption, as that of Monday night, we ask your consideration and indulgence.

THE HABIT OF THRIFT.

The American Bankers' Association is pursuing a very vigorous campaign in behalf of thrift and is sending much printed matter on the subject for newspaper use. It is good stuff. It would be an interesting question to discuss, as to how far the thrift spirit in this country is growing or declining.

Certainly there are not as many small economies as formerly. People do not haggle over cents much now. Formerly if people paid a copper too much in making change, the majority of them would go back after it. Now they laugh and let it go. In settling bills people feel rather shamefaced about getting down to small coins. They pay even money, a few cents too much, and then call it near enough.

And people are not as strenuous about small savings as they were. They are more fearful of slight effort. They may know that they could buy groceries cheaper if every one would call and get their parcels, pay cash and carry them home. But stores often find it hard to get started on this basis, so slow are people to put themselves out for small savings.

For people with handsome incomes, small savings may not pay for the bother. The man who spends fifteen minutes waiting around for a package of meat at 10 cents' reduction, could perhaps put in his valuable time to better advantage. But his case is exceptional.

In spite of unthrifty habits it still remains true that savings are increasing. But whether they are increasing in proportion to population and living costs would be an open question. The interest on a bank deposit of $1,000 would not go much farther today than the return on $500 thirty years ago, particularly when you consider that interest rates were higher then. It still remains true that "many a little makes a mickle."

"Foreign relations taking first place," says a headline in the New York Journal of Commerce. The article following goes on to say that economic questions as political issues are being forced to the rear. The President said some time ago that the Republicans would have but one issue—the tariff. But he has changed his mind again, and given them another—the foreign policy. The Republicans will meet him on his own ground with either one, or both.

Stingaree

BY E. W. HORNUNG.

Copyright by Charles Scribner's Sons

"Miss Bouverie," said Stingaree, "you may well suppose that I have borne you in mind all these years. As a matter of honest fact, when I first heard your name this evening I was slow to connect it with any human being. You look angry. I intend no insult. If you have not forgotten the life I was leading before you would very readily understand that I have never heard your name from those days to this. That is my misfortune. It also my own fault. It should suffice that when I did remember I came at my peril to hear you sing and that before I dreamed of coming an inch farther. But I heard them say both in the hall and outside that you owed your start to me. Now one thinks of it, it must have been a rather striking advertisement, and I reflected that not another soul in Sydney can possibly owe me anything at all. So I came straight to you without thinking twice about it. Criminal as I have been and am, my one thought was and is that I deserve some little consideration at your hands."

"You mean money?"
"I have not a penny. It would make all the difference to me. And I give you my word, if that is any satisfaction to you, I would be an honest man from this time forth."

"You actually ask me to assist a criminal and escaped convict—me, Hilda Bouverie—at my own absolute risk?"

"I took a risk for you nine years ago, Miss Bouverie; it was all I did take," said Stingaree, "at the concert that made your name."

"And you rub it in," she told him.

"I am running for my life!" he exclaimed in answer. "It wouldn't have been necessary—that would have been enough for the Miss Bouverie I knew then. But you are different; you are another being, you are a woman of the world. Your heart, your heart is dead and gone!"

He cut her to it none the less; he could not have inflicted a deeper wound. The blood leaped to her face and neck. She cried out at the insult, the indignity, the outrage of it all, and, crying, she darted to the door.

It was locked.

She turned on Stingaree.

"You dared to lock the door—you dared! Give me the key this instant!"

"I refuse."

"Very well! You have heard my voice; you shall hear it again!"

Her pale lips made the perfect round, her grand teeth gleamed in the electric light.

He arrested her, not with violence, but a shrug.

"I shall jump out of the window and break my neck. They don't take me twice—alive."

"Something has happened," she whispered, turning a scared face up to him.

"I hear your name. They have traced you here. They are coming! Oh, what are we to do?"

He strode over to the door.

"If you fear a scandal I can give myself up this moment and explain all."

He spoke eagerly. The thought was sudden. She rose up, looking in his eyes.

"No, you shall not," she said. Her hand flew out behind her, and in two seconds the brilliant room had clicked into a velvet darkness.

"Stand like a mouse," she whispered, and he heard her reach the inner door, where she stood like another.

Steps and voices came along the landing at a quick crescendo.

"Miss Bouverie! Miss Bouverie!"

It was his excellency's own gay voice, and it continued until with much noise Miss Bouverie flung her bedroom door wide open, put on the light within, ran across the boudoir, put on the boudoir light and stooped to parley through the keyhole.

"The bushranger Stingaree has been traced to Government House."

"Good heavens!"

"One of your windows was seen open."

"He had not come in through it."

"Then you were heard raising your voice."

"That was to my maid. This is all through her. I am so ashamed!"

"Not a bit, Miss Bouverie. I am ashamed of bothering. Confound the police!"

When the voices and the steps had died away Hilda Bouverie turned to Stingaree, her whole face shining, her deep blue eyes alight.

"There!" said she. "Could you have done that better yourself?"

"Not half so well."

"And you thought I could forget?"

"I thought nothing. I only came to you in my scrape."

After years of imprisonment he could speak of this life and death hazard as a scrap. She looked at him with admiring eyes, her personal triumph had put an end to her indignation.

"My poor Lea! I wonder how much she has heard? I shall have to tell her nearly all. She can wait for me at Melbourne or Adelaide, and I can pick her up on my voyage home. It will be no joke without her until then I give her up for your sake!"

Stingaree hung his head. He was a changed man.

"And I," he said grimly—not patheetically—"and I am a convict who escaped by violence this afternoon."

Hilda smiled.

"I met Mr. Brady the other day," she said, "and I heard of him tonight. He is not going to die!"

He stared at her unscrupulous radiance.

"Do you wonder at me?" she said. "Did you never hear that musical people had no morals?"

And her smile bewitched him more and more.

"It explains us both!" declared Miss Bouverie. "But do you know what I have kept all these years?" she went on. "Do you know what has been my mascot, what I have had about me whenever I have sung in public, since and including that time at Yallaroo? Can't you guess?"

He could not. She turned her back; he heard some gossamer give, and the next moment she was holding a strange trophy in both hands.

It was a tiny silken bandolier, containing six revolver cartridges, with bullet and cap intact.

"Can't you guess now?" she glowered.

"No. I never missed them. They are not like any I ever had."

"Don't you remember the man who chased you out and mislaid at you six times? He was the overseer on the station. His name may come back to me, but his face I shall never forget. He had a revolver in his pocket, but he dared not lower a hand. I took

"That was to my maid. This is all through her. I am so ashamed!"

It out of his pocket and was to hand it out to him when I got the chance. Until then I was to keep it under my shawl. That was when I managed to unload every chamber. These are the cartridges I took out, and they have been my mascot ever since."

"So you saved my life?" he said.

"You had saved my life all the time. And yet I came to ask you to do as much for me as I had done for you!"

He turned away. His hands were clenched behind his back.

"I will do more," she cried, "if more could be done by one person for another! Here are jewels." She stripped her neck of its rope of pearls. "And here are notes." She dived into a bureau and thrust a handful upon him. "With these alone you should be able to get to England or America, and if you want more when you get there write to Hilda Bouverie! As long as she has any there will be some for you!"

Tears filled her eyes.

Stingaree glanced toward the window.

"I can't go yet; I'm afraid."

"You shan't! Why should you?"

"But I still fear they may not be satisfied downstairs. I am ashamed to ask it. But will you do one little thing more for me?"

"Name it."

"It is only to make assurance doubly sure. Go downstairs and let them see you. Tell them more details, if you like. Go down as you are and say that without your maid you could not find anything else to put on. I promise not to vanish with everything in your absence."

"You do promise?"

"On my liberty!"

She looked in his face with a very wistful sweetness.

"If they were to find me out," she said, "I wonder how many years they would give me? I neither know nor care. It would be worth a few. I thought I had lived since I saw you last, but this is the best fun I have ever had since Yallaroo!"

She stood for a moment before opening the door that he unlocked for her, stood before him in all her flushed and brilliant radiance and blew a kiss to him before she went.

The governor was easily found. He was grieved at her troubling to descend at such an hour and did not detain her five minutes in all. He thought she was in a fever, but that the fever became her beyond belief. Reassured on every point, Miss Bouverie was back in her room, but a very few minutes after she had left it.

It was empty. She searched all over, first behind the curtains, then between the pedestals of the bureau, but Stingaree was nowhere in the room, and the bedroom door was still locked. It was a second look behind the curtains that revealed an open window and the scratch of a boot upon the white enamel. It was no breakfast drop into the shrubs.

So he had gone without a word, but also without breaking his word, for with wet eyes and a white face, between anger and admiration, Hilda Bouverie had already discovered her bundle of notes and her rope of pearls.

JOHN McCULLOCH TO STAND PAT.

Republican National Committeeman J. W. McCulloch of Owensboro, will stand pat. He met a number of prominent Republicans at Lexington Saturday night and after a conference it was stated that if the protest of certain members of the party against the election of Mr. McCulloch was carried to the State Committee, not more than ten votes could be possibly obtained to sustain it and only seven were assured. Mr. McCulloch said that he had been duly elected National Committeeman and would serve in that capacity for the next four years.

After the election of Mr. McCulloch in Louisville March 1 he left the state on business and the meeting Saturday was the first he has had with his friends since the protest against his selection as National Committeeman was made. Among the Republican leaders who attended the conference was Edwin P. Morrow of Somerset, William D. Cochran of Maysville, John Hardwick of Powell county, Harry Giovannillo and John G. Stoll of Lexington, Ed. T. Franks of Owensboro, Maurice Galvin of Covington, H. Green Garrett of Winchester, Judge R. H. Winn of Mt. Sterling, Phil Brown of Hopkinsville, E. R. Miller of Paducah. The "half a nigger" delegate question was taken up but no change in the allotment of one-half a vote to the "cullud brother" was made.

The will of Mrs. Peter King, who killed herself by jumping out of a window in Cincinnati several days ago and who has relatives in this city, was probated at Louisville last week. Her estate is valued at $40,000, she having owned property in Frankfort and Louisville.

Sweet Pea Seed

We have an extra fine mixture of sweet peas this year, and as we grow thousands of them, we know our business when it comes to Sweet Peas.

We pay as high as two dollars an ounce for our forcing varieties, but you do not wish that kind for outside planting; we have an ORCHID FLOWERING mixture that we can sell you at 25 cents per ounce.

We also have the GRANDIFLORA varieties in separate colors if you wish them, and sell them at 15 cents per ounce.

The GRANDIFLORA MIXTURE is the best one for outside planting, as they do not grow too tall and bloom much better than any other variety.

TARIFF POLICY TO BE CHANGED.

London, April 4.—Two members of the government, Mr. McKenna, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who directs fiscal policy and frames tariff legislation, and Bonar Law, Minister of Colonies, have given an idea of the government attitude on the agitation which has been sweeping Manchester, Birmingham and the great industrial centers, for a complete overturning of British policy giving free open markets for foreign goods and the inauguration of a new policy of tariff restriction.

The two ministers represent the two extremes of sentiment within the government on this fundamental question of British policy, the chancellor of the exchequer belonging to the Cobden element strongly attached to the traditional doctrine of open markets, and Bonar Law representing the later element which took up Joseph Chamberlain's campaign for protection of home industries. Each has made an address recently, showing how both sides of the government approach the same conclusion that the war has changed everything and has opened the way for a new economic policy. The two ministers differ, however, in one respect, Mr. Law holding that in the change to a tariff basis "we must begin on a new basis and put aside all preconceived ideas," while Mr. McKenna maintains that proposed tariff changes will be the result of common agreement and enlightenment from the war, rather than a surrender of old ideas.

AVERS STANLEY BROKE PLEDGES

Col. A. H. Sommers Attacks Record of Administration in Lengthy Editorial in Elizabethtown News.

Elizabethtown, Ky., April 4.—Col. A. H. Sommers, in a lengthy editorial in his Elizabethtown News last Friday, under the caption, "Some of the Unfilled Pledges of Governor Stanley," says:

"Governor Owsley Stanley, with characteristic modesty, has issued a lengthy card, giving extravagant praise of what he claims has been accomplished for the state at Frankfort this winter. He truthfully observes that a number of the Democratic platform pledges have been carried out, and for this the Legislature is entitled to the fullest credit. But how about some of Mr. Stanley's pledges to the people, made while he was a candidate in 1915? What has he done to redeem them?"

"From every stump in Kentucky, Owsley Stanley declared himself to be the arch enemy and inveterate foe of 'invisible government,' but the sordid story of the Pike county bill is sufficient answer to this, and the liquor lobby, powerfully entrenched, was most persistent and pernicious in its efforts to control and corrupt legislation. Its minions were at Frankfort opposing every measure looking to the present laws effective.

"Instead of being driven out of Frankfort, as Candidate Stanley promised, 'invisible government' thrived this year as never before."

Hasn't Kept Faith.

Col. Sommers says the Governor did not abolish useless offices as he promised in his very earnest and artful efforts to win votes for himself upon the economy issue, but says: "We have the instance of Eli Brown, the Governor's political confidante, drawing $3,000 a year as attorney for the State Rating Board, a position which had been vacant for some time prior to his appointment and the duties of which Attorney General Logan declared since January 1, could be performed by his (Logan's) office force, without the appointment of an attorney. Is Governor Owsley Stanley keeping faith with regard to useless offices?"

"Turn on the light" was one of Stanley's pet phrases to catch votes in 1915," but he appointed two assistant attorneys general, at a combined salary of $475 per month to make these investigations, and the first object of their attack was Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, president of the Kentucky Illiteracy Commission; the purpose of the attack was to crucify Mrs. Stewart and destroy her work in the state. Governor Owsley Stanley inspired that attack. Is that the kind of 'light' Kentuckians wanted 'turned on'?"

Tool of Interests.

He says Mr. Stanley could not have been elected Governor "if he had not unequivocally declared himself in favor of the county unit law, and its strict enforcement, and that thousands of temperance Democrats, opposed to state wide prohibition, accepted his statements as true and voted for him, but throughout the entire session he showed himself to be the plain tool of the liquor interests. His opposition to the anti-shiping bill designed to prevent bootlegging, is alone sufficient to knock into a cocked hat his promise to stand for the enforcement of the county unit law."

"The administration is one of complete subservience to the whisky and brewery trust and Stanley's pre-election pledge that he stood for the county unit law is a mockery and a shame.

"Neither could Governor Stanley have been elected Governor if he had not promised the people that steps would at once be taken toward the reduction of the state debt."

Demands An Answer.

"Today Owsley Stanley can not point to one constructive act to accomplish this purpose. The Legislature, of which he professes such a great degree of pride, was in session sixty days and utterly failed to deal with the most pressing problem of the state. The fault largely lies with Governor Stanley. What of his pledge to the people last year that he would life the state debt? Has he kept the faith there? But the people of Kentucky can ask him about the 'invisible' government which flourished at Frankfort this year. They can find out what 'useless offices' he has abolished. They can learn why Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart was, of all persons, singled out for a vicious administration attack. They can jog the Governor's memory on the state debt. If Governor Stanley wants to satisfy Kentucky Democrats and Kentucky citizens, he might write another card, and explain these things."

"THE WRONG DOOR."

Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven have been converted to photoplaying. After many years of popularity upon the musical comedy and vaudeville stage, they have quit the footlights for good and all. Bluebird Photoplays have made the important capture and will present them in "The Wrong Door" at the Pastime theater tomorrow with Mr. De Haven playing the role of a millionaire detective and Floa Parker De Haven appearing as a musical comedy star who has won the heart but disdains the hands of the supercilious hero of the occasion. Just how long the actress held out against the pleadings of the man and his millions is better left to the photoplay itself.

"CALL OF THE CUMBERLANDS."

Supporting Dustin Farnum in the "Call of the Cumberland," a Pallas Pictures production to be seen at the Washington theater tonight on the Paramount program, are three Paramount players who have established themselves as stars. They are Myrtle Stedman, Winifred Kingston and the venerable actor, Herbert Standing. Thus it may be seen that Mr. Farnum is surrounded by a cast of exceptional merit, one which carries the action of the story in a highly capable fashion. Seldom are four stars of such brilliance found together in a photoplay.

SEVERE PUNISHMENT

Of Mrs. Chappell, of Five Years'

Standing, Relieved by Cardui.

Mr. Airy, N. C.—Mrs. Sarah M. Chappell of this town, says: "I suffered for five years with womanly troubles, also stomach troubles, and my punishment was more than any one could tell."

I tried most every kind of medicine, but none did me any good. I read one day about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I decided to try it. I had not taken but about six bottles until I was almost cured. It did me more good than all the other medicines I had tried, put together.

My friends began asking me why I looked so well, and I told them about Cardui. Several are now taking it.

Do you, lady reader, suffer from any of the ailments due to womanly trouble, such as headache, backache, sideache, sleeplessness, and that everlastingly tired feeling?

If so, let us urge you to give Cardui a trial. We feel confident it will help you, just as it has a million other women in the past half century.

Begin taking Cardui to-day. You won't regret it. All druggists.

SIGNS OF DANGER.

That Should Be Heeded By Maysville People.

There's serious danger in neglecting any weakness of the kidneys. The warning that Nature gives should not be overlooked. If troubled by too frequent passage of the kidney secretions; burning or scalding; if the secretions are highly colored and contain sediment when left standing—if you have backache, too, with frequent headaches and dizziness, make up your mind that your kidneys are effected and begin using some reliable kidney remedy. Deaths from kidney disease have increased in the United States alone, 72 per cent in the last 20 years. The risk is great—you can't afford to delay. Maysville people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Can you ask for better proof of merit than the statement of this Maysville resident?

W. F. Lynch, 127 W. Third St., Maysville, Ky., says: "My kidneys were weak and the passages of the kidney secretions were scanty and painful. Having used Doan's Kidney Pills before, I again got a box and they quickly restored my kidneys to a normal condition."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Lynch had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

When Health Breaks

the cause is often found to be improper habits of living—principally wrong eating.

Many foods, especially white flour products, lack certain necessary mineral elements, phosphate of potash, etc. These valuable energizing elements are abundantly supplied by the field grains, but thrown out in the milling process to make the flour white.

The delicious, pure, easily digestible food, made of whole wheat and malted barley, supplies all the rich nutriment of the grains—including the vital mineral elements—most necessary for both mental and physical health.

Grape-Nuts

"There's a Reason"

Grocers everywhere sell Grape-Nuts.
